China International Wood Products Summit 2006 – October 28th & 29th

High Praise for our 3rd annual conference, in Shanghai, China.

A first class venue, great speakers, quality tabletop displays and informal networking sessions combined to attract over 220 international and Chinese delegates to our 3rd annual conference in China.

We received excellent reviews from our sponsors and from many of our conference delegates. A sample of the comments include: ‘I learned a great deal and will definitely be a future attendee’; ‘Congratulations on your successful conference in Shanghai, I am sure you have left a big impression to all of the international and domestic participants’; ‘I enjoyed the conference immensely and found it extremely informative, hopefully turn it into some business’; ‘It was a real eye opener for us’; ‘I had a great time at the show and have developed some solid leads’; and ‘I was very impressed with the quality of the conference. Congratulations’.

The conference program received an overall rating of “five out of a possible six points” from delegates. The survey also indicated that many participants would like to attend our next conference in China. As a result, WOOD MARKETS is already planning a fourth annual China conference, with details to be announced shortly. Where and how China fits into key export markets will again be the headline topic at the next conference, as many 2006 participants have learned firsthand about the constant change in China and the need for international producers, importers and exporters to keep informed about China’s dynamic wood products industry.

Note: Proceedings of the 2006 China International Wood Products Summit are now available.
